

Almost every piece of knowledge you do that is longer than a few sentences should be organized into paragraphs. Christopher Lantieri shows a reader where the subdivisions of an essay begin and end, and thus help the reader see the organization of the essay. Mary Blomquist's main points. Paragraphs can contain many different kinds of information. A paragraph could contain a series of brief examples or a single long illustration of a general point. It might describe a place, character, or process, narrate a series of events, compare or contrast two or more things, classify items into categories, or describe causes and effects. Regardless of the kind of information they contain, all paragraphs share certain characteristics. One of the most important of these is a
